HE announcement of the Fifth Annual Exhibition of the Society of Independent Artists, issued in the autumn of 1920, read in part, as follows:

"The work of the Society will continue as it was begun, the exhibition being open to all artists, without selection of works by a jury and without the distinctions made by prizes.

"The Fourth Exhibition was the first to make a complete financial success, not only having avoided the deficit incurred during each of the three preceding years, but having left a substantial surplus in the treasury. This sum has been added to by persons desirous of aiding the development of art in America, and the directors are thereby enabled to reduce the dues of members. Three other encouraging facts may be noted: the membership of the Society grew in 1920 by over one fourth, the attendance at the exhibition more than doubled that of the preceding year and the sales of painting and sculpture were considerably increased.

"The progress here noted makes it extremely probable that the number of exhibitors for the coming year will be a large one. The lists must be closed sooner than usual and no more exhibitors can then be accepted. It is therefore important that members work harder than ever before to bring the quality of work in the exhibition to the highest possible level. Artists of all schools should see to it that the strong workers of their acquaintance join the Society.

"In order to make our Fifth Annual Exhibition a banner year for sculpture, the directors have voted to permit sculptors to show four pieces.

"The Society of Independent Artists is the only body in America that conducts exhibitions solely on the principle of giving every individual a chance to present his ideas through his work. The support of the Society during the past four years by artists in every section of the country, from the most radical to the most conservative, from the young unknown workers to the men of the most eminent position, is the best augury for the continuance of the Independent idea."

To this statement should be added the renewed thanks of the Society to Dr. Edgar L. Hewett and the Museum of Santa Fe, New Mexico, for the loan of the paintings by Indians of the Southwest which we have again the pleasure of exhibiting. The great interest shown by the artists, the public and the critics in this important and little-known phase of American art, made the directors feel that the exhibition should be repeated, with new material.

The death of Miss Mary C. Rogers in August, 1920, deprived the Society of one of its ablest and most faithful executives,—one who had borne a considerable share of its work from the first days of its existence. As a memorial of her career, the directors voted to hold a retrospective exhibition of her work. In paying this tribute to the friend who has gone from us and in recalling the great help she freely gave us, there is no intention to establish a precedent, but to supplement the work of the living members by a more complete showing of the art of an individual than is usually possible at our exhibitions. It is hoped that the quality of this group of pictures—a quality which must seem new to many visitors—will cause the latter to seek again, among the other works of the year, the talents that could furnish such a gallery of contemporary art of the highest interest.

Although the effort of the directors was rather to reduce than to increase the size of the year's exhibition, the number of exhibitors has again grown. Our wall-space is already more heavily taxed than we should like and the problem of showing the exhibits properly becomes more difficult to meet. At the same time, it is important that the Society grow freely in the measure of the increasing desire of the artists to share in the exhibitions. The one solution of the problem lies in the great public gallery of which New York stands so much in need. The Society asks the help of its members and friends in securing adequate exhibition facilities.

Exhibitors and their Exhibits

The exhibition is hung in alphabetical order, beginning at the entrance with the letter V which was drawn by lot.

A majority of the works exhibited are for sale. The prices will be found on the number cards of the exhibits, except where the word "Desk" replaces the price. In this case, the price is obtainable from the attendants.

The plates illustrating this catalogue were not selected by the Society, but are simply those of the members who paid for the space.
